

ABSTRACT

A new and distinct variety of peach, Prunus persica, tree having the following unique combination of desirable features:

1. The new and distinct variety of peach tree is of average height and of upright growth and a regular and productive bearer of peaches.
2. Producing a very firm fruit having a resilient flesh texture.
3. Blossoms are non-showy when in full bloom.
4. A substantially oval spherical fruit with skin of dark red cover overlying a yellow which covers approximately twenty percent (20%) of its surface at maturity.
5. When harvested, the peduncle often remains affixed to the pit.
6. Late maturing fruit of good taste.
7. A late maturing fruit of good storage and shelf life.

1 Drawing Sheet